real crazy!!! A liquid solid! Amazing and fun! Roll into a ball, it bounces! Hit with hammer—it shatters! Pull it slowly—it stretches! Press it on a comic book and it steals a perfect impression in color...Leave it alone and it sinks into a tired little puddle. Comes in a leakproof plastic egg...You'll relax with this one—and really have a ball.

It is made of the wonder material your parents have read about in Life, Time, and other magazines. Truly a great new toy. This is the real THING.

CLUBHOUSE CACKLES

Hi, kids! This is KELLY THE GREAT invitin' all of ya into the clubhouse for some laughs. At least we hope ya get some laughs outta these pages—or would ya rather have more pictures and less readin' material? Write in and let us know, will ya?

Well, anyway, here we go . . . !

My cousin, Mickey, is giving that poor pop of his as much trouble as ever . . .

One day, just to make sure Mickey didn't have a screw loose upstairs, his pop took him to a brain-doctor.

The doctor started asking Mickey questions.

"Mickey," the doctor asked, "are you a boy or a girl?"

"A girl," Mickey answered.

After having a tough time gulping that answer down, the doctor asked Mickey another question.

"When you grow up, Mickey, will you be a man or a woman?"

"A woman," Mickey said.

Mickey's pop couldn't keep quiet any more. "Mickey," he exploded, "I know that you know better than that! What's the big idea, giving the doctor those nutty answers?"

"Why shouldn't I, pop?" Mickey yelled, pointing to the doctor. "He's asking nutty questions—ain't he?"

Another day when Mickey was taking it easy, his pop said, "You ought to be ashamed of yourself! When George Washington was your age, he was already a surveyor and holding down a job."

"So what?" Mickey said. "When he was your age, pop—he was President of the United States!"

Then there was the time Mickey came into the house with his little cousin—and the little kid's shirt was full of holes.

"Wh-what happened?" Mickey's pop asked, pointing at all those holes.

"Ya told me to play a quiet game with him, didn't ya?" Mickey said.

"Y-es . . . but what happened?"

"So we played grocery store—and he was the Swiss cheese!"

Once his pop was talking to Mickey about the report card he'd just brought home.

"Mickey, aren't you ashamed to have the worst report card in a class of thirty-four children?"

"Naaa, pop—it could've been a lot worse"

"Worse! . . . How could it have possibly been worse?"

"That's easy, pop! Just suppose the class had a hundred kids!"

Once for a split-second, Mickey's mother was proud of him. That was when Mickey asked her if he could have the ice cream in the refrigerator.

"You dear little boy," his mother said, "I'm so glad you thought to ask! Of course, you can have it, darling!"

"Gosh, mom," Mickey said, "am I glad you said yes!"

"How come, darling—did you want the ice cream so much?"

"Nope—because I ate it already!"

Hi, kids—this is PIZZA, with some funnybone ticklers about my cousin, Sammy . . .

Sammy's a kid who not only loves to eat—he lives to eat.

All Sammy has to do is just look at a scale, and it breaks.

One day Sammy told me why fat people are always so good-natured.

"It's because," Sammy said, "it takes them so long to get mad clear through."

Then Sammy told me about a fat man who'd just been hit by a car.

"Couldn't you have gone around me?" the fat man groaned to the driver, who was helping him up onto his feet.

"That's just what I wanted to do," the driver said. "But I didn't have enough gasoline."

Then there was the fat man who asked the side-show owner for a job.

"What's your act?" the owner asked him.

"I'm Chester, the Chicken King," the fat man said. "I eat ten chickens at one sitting."

"You do? Hmmm—that sounds like a swell act. But we run four shows a day. That'll make forty chicken a day! You sure you can eat that many?"

"Sure, I'm sure!"

"But on Saturday we have six shows! That'll make sixty chickens on that day! You sure you can eat that many?"

"Sure, I'm sure!"

"Then you're hired! Here's your contract! Sign it!"

The fat man read the contract carefully, and then shook his head. "I'm not signing this unless you put in a time-off clause!"

"Time-off clause? . . . What's that?"

"No matter how many shows you run a day, I must have time off for my regular meals!"

Hi, kids—this is JINX! A lot of ya wrote in that ya got a big kick outta those sentences I made up in school with special words in them! So here are some more that got my teacher even dizzier than last time. . . .

These are the words my teacher gave us:

1) bulletin; 2) burden; 3) Canada; 4) forfeit; 5) gruesome; 6) juicy; 7) laziness.

And these are the sentences I made up outta my own head:

1) The cowboy got a bulletin his leg.

2) Robin Hood went hunting but didn't get a burden he came home.

3) Buy the best hot dogs and a Canada best sauerkraut.

4) Most animals have forfeit instead of

5) After a day of not shaving my pop gruesome whiskers.

6) Did juicy what I just saw?

7) My baby brother laziness crib all day.

And to show ya what a real genius I am, here are some boners that I pulled on my last few tests. . . .

The Golden Rule is that the man who first finds gold keeps it.

Seniors are Spanish men.

A stowaway is the man with the biggest appetite on the boat.

Monsoon is French for mister.

Hello, boys and girls—this is CHOP-STICKS! If you like, I tell some riddles now. . . .

Why do all duels take a very short time?

Because it only takes two seconds to arrange them.

On which side of a pitcher is the handle?

On the outside.

When is a spanking like a hat?

When it is felt.

What musical instrument should one never believe?

A lyre.

Why is a large coat like a banana peel?

Both are easy to slip on.

When a lady faints, what number does she need?

You must bring her 2.

Which is the best land for young children?

Lapland.

Why is a hen sitting on a fence like a penny?

Because she has a head on one side and a tail on the other.

What keeps the moon from falling?

It must be the moonbeams.

Which is the largest room in the world?

The room for improvement.
